Establishment

The Arab Center for Agricultural Development “ACAD” was established in 1988 as a project under the name of the United Agricultural Company in Jericho and Ramallah. The project aimed to build the economic capacities of small farmers who were facing risks of collapse during the Palestinian First Intifada through providing them with in-kind contributions. The project primarily targeted the agricultural lands in the Jordan Valley and later on expanded to include the Central West Bank and Nablus in the North West Bank.

In 1993, the project was institutionalized into a developmental organization by registering it as a non-governmental non-profit organization in Jerusalem under the name of the Arab Center for Agricultural Development (ACAD) specialized in financing small enterprises. The Center has identified its broad objectives, which focused on developing the agricultural sector and assisting small farmers through financing, marketing and technical support.

Strategic Objectives

- To empower and build the capacities of farmers and cooperatives so as to improve their productivity and economic situation and defend their individual and collective rights.
- To contribute to improving the Palestinian food security and conservation of environment.

Introduction

In 2015, ACAD staff encountered some difficulties and challenges. These were represented in shrinking of grants and financial assistance provided by donors, on one hand and mobility difficulties among governorates, on the other. Since the beginning of the Palestinian uprising in November 2015, the occupation authorities used all suppressive procedures including repeated closures and raids of the Palestinian cities, installment of barriers and checkpoints to restrict freedom of citizens' movement. These difficulties were a challenge for the implementation of certain activities in terms of required time and level.

Despite of these difficulties, ACAD achieved several successes, whose implementation included hard circumstances. We had no choice but to double our efforts in an attempt to overcome these difficulties.

During 2015, ACAD focused its activities on achieving its four strategic objectives. For that purpose, it implemented activities and projects that serve the achievement of each of these objectives.

After launching its specialized company in small and microfinance, ACAD Finance Company, in the beginning of 2014, ACAD, through joint work with ACAD Finance, implemented a number of economic activities such as generation of job opportunities for women and children and opening new markets for them. Additionally, ACAD provided strong and great support for farmers in marginalized areas, especially those in areas located in the vicinity and beyond the Apartheid Separation Wall, in Gaza Strip, East Jerusalem and the Old City. It was proven that the Center's work in these areas has remarkably and positively had contributed to supporting these people's steadfastness and resilience and improving their economic and living conditions.

All thanks and appreciation go to all ACAD's staff and Board of Directors members who worked tirelessly and with their full capacities to achieve the Center's strategic objectives and successes, challenging all obstacles, constraints and external difficulties they faced.

Executive Summary

2015 was the year of specialization within ACAD's programs. Several activities were implemented in the targeted locations. Aiming to improve the economic and social situation of the target groups, these activities were planned and implemented interactively and by a participatory approach between ACAD's staff and the targeted groups at all levels and sectors in line with the Center's Mission and Vision. This approach confirms ACAD's correct and appropriate methodology in implementing activities related to its scope of work and the full knowledge and awareness of the executive staff and its belief and involvement with the Board of Directors' ideas related to ACAD's mission and objectives. The Arab Center for Agricultural Development has strived to achieve the third strategic objective "To contribute to providing emergency and relief support for farmers and development of the affected and “C” areas.” But it has encountered several difficulties in raising funds that enable it to achieve this objective in both Gaza and the West Bank. Furthermore, the Center faced difficulties in obtaining adequate funds needed to implement its full strategic plan. Another basic challenge confronted ACAD in achieving its objectives was the movement restrictions within the West Bank, especially in Jerusalem and from and to Gaza Strip. Despite all these constraints and challenges, ACAD implemented a number of distinguished projects and completed the implementation of another number of projects from previous years. This is in addition to working on projects that started in 2014 and would continue until 2017 or maybe beyond that year.

During 2015, ACAD implemented 11 developmental projects in a total amount of $915,974. The activities of these projects focused on development, training, rehabilitation, economic empowerment, lobbying and advocacy. Geographically, these projects were distributed all over different areas of the west Bank, Gaza Strip and East Jerusalem and were mostly concentrated in the Palestinian rural areas. The number of beneficiaries (women, youth and farmers) of these projects exceeded 4,127 of them 1,688 women, 2,427 men and 102 persons with special needs.

The Center attentively worked on building the staff capacities by involving them in training courses and workshops inside and outside Palestine. This was positively reflected on the staff performance and skills, especially in achieving the Center's strategic objectives.

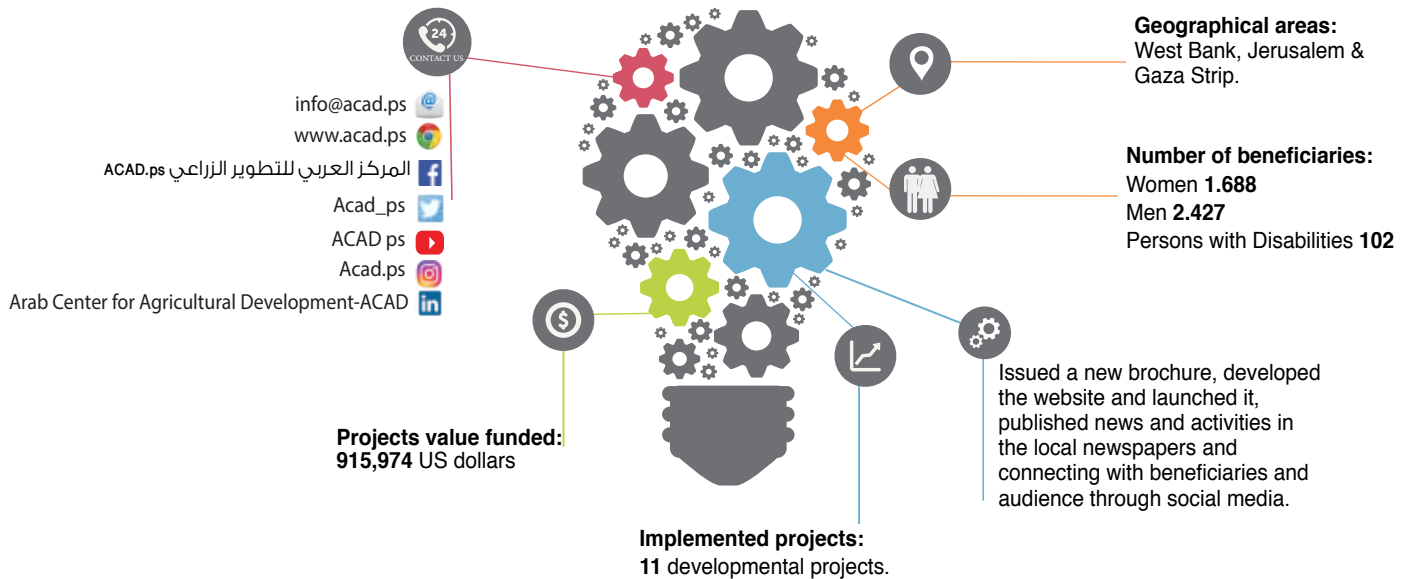

In parallel with building the capacity of its staff, ACAD worked on promoting professional and practical knowledge of the local community by organizing a number of training courses and workshops for the beneficiaries of the Center's programs. This knowledge was provided through the experiences of ACAD staff with the assistance of external experts. Some of these activities were organized in consultation and cooperation with other organizations working in the same field.

Additionally, the Center focused on media. For this purpose, it issued a new brochure on the Center's work compatible with its strategic plan. It also developed its website and launched it in a new design, which included a large amount of information about the activities of the Center and reflecting its vision, mission and objectives. To increase its visibility, ACAD published its most important news and its implemented activities in the local newspapers. In the same context, ACAD attached importance on the necessity of communication with its beneficiaries in particular and with the public in general through the different social media such as the Facebook, Twitter and YouTube. It also established its special account on Instagram and LinkedIn.

- Organizing a broad campaign that aimed to attract the attention of decision makers regarding the share of agriculture from the public budget of the Palestinian Authority, demanding the PA to raise it from 1% to 5%. Increasing this share will contribute to supporting the productive sectors and the food security and will confront the increasing rates of poverty and unemployment in addition to consolidating the farmers' adherence and steadfastness on their land.

- ACAD in cooperation with the Local Network conducted a Co-existence Day with a farmer living in a marginalized and remote area in south Gaza Strip nearby Sufa Crossing Border in Rafah Governorate. This Day aimed to raise awareness about the sufferings of farmers in the borders area, empower them and affirm on supporting and backing them.

The project provided training for the beneficiaries on how to start up their enterprises and how to prepare action plans and feasibility studies for the projects proposed by the students. Additionally, each beneficiary was supported with a small amount of money to apply his/her enterprise by a miniature model to study the extent of its success from the practical aspect.

Through specialized workshops, the project followed up all students in implementing their enterprises, which were presented for the audience so as to select the best two enterprises from each group. The winners were granted financial incentives to complete their enterprises and enter the market.

It is worth to mention that a number of students established their enterprises by their own financial resources while others obtained small loans from ACAD Finance to start up their enterprises.

« Students Scholarships Project:

« ACAD in Media and Social Media Networks:

During 2015, ACAD gave attention to the media aspect publishing its news and the projects and activities it is implementing through its website, local newspapers or social media networks.

In mid 2015, ACAD launched its new website in both English and Arabic (www.acad.ps), taking notice that the website is compatible with its strategy and including full and comprehensive information about its activities and projects in addition to publishing the Center's financial and administrative reports.

ACAD also focused on publishing its activities regularly in two local newspapers: Al-Quds and Al-Ayyam. As regards the Center's activities and participation in conferences and workshops abroad, they were covered by foreign newspapers.

During the last two years, companies and organizations sought to build websites on the Facebook, Twitter and other social media, due to the fact that these sites are the more visited in Palestine and for being a fast way to reach users. In this aspect, ACAD concentrated on keeping abreast of this development so as to reach the largest possible groups of the society. For this purpose, it continuously updated its website on Facebook and Twitter and posted news and photos of activities it implemented. Additionally, it provided its own YouTube channel with videos made by the Center or partners with them ACAD implemented joint projects. It also created accounts on other networks such as Instagram and LinkedIn, which are continuously updated.
